The #MeToo campaign, the American Women’s March and the International Women’s Strikes of 2017 and 2018 have put the feminist agenda at the heart of the political and cultural debate in the Western world. But there are still voices that violently question and respond to this movement.

In these two seminar sessions we will look at the past, the present and the future (?) of feminism, with special attention to the current representations of the movement in popular culture and the way these representations may affect the collective understanding of the movement and radical responses to it. Our focus will be the most immediate history of feminism in Europe and the United States and contemporary challenges.

Session I: How did we get here? Do we still need feminism? How is feminism perceived today? How many feminisms are there?

Session II: Feminism in the media. Feminism and the market. Radical responses to the movement. Final discussion: Can we do it?

---

Open to UiB students and faculty

Coffee will be provided. Registration desired but not required: tinyurl.com/feministchallenges

Location
Student Center, Seminar Room A

Seminar I
Monday 18 February
12:15-14:00

Seminar II
Wednesday 20 February
12:15-14:00

---

Dr. Prieto, professor of English literature, is visiting UiB on an Erasmus exchange with the Department of Foreign Languages.

sara.prieto@ua.es
@sprietogc