Kaiser’s main work and areas of expertise are in the fields of philosophy of science, ethics of science, food ethics, and technology assessment. His areas of competence include social studies of science and technology, history of science, ethics, logic, and history of philosophy. For many years Kaiser's research activities have taken place in a multi- and inter-disciplinary environment. He was among the founding members of the European Network for Research Integrity Offices (ENRIO) and was actively involved in the first two World Conferences on Scientific Integrity. Through detailed case studies, he has furthermore considerable insights in diverse fields of science, such as the history of plate tectonics, aquaculture, and biotechnology. Another topic of detailed study is the Precautionary Principle. In all of these cases Kaiser has developed a unique focus on ethical issues, which now makes him one of the leading scholars within food ethics / seafood ethics. His leading role in the conduct of three Norwegian consensus conferences, has led to a special interest in participatory methods, among others publishing on the use of the ethical matrix. He has (co-)published 4 books, co-edited 2 further books, published more than 180 scientific articles, written several committee studies (including ethical guidelines) and project reports, and edited three thematic issues of scientific journals.
